Course summary

This 7 day module (12 - 19 March, 15 - 16 April and 20 - 21 May 2013) is provided as a CPD and accredited module for GP's, Practice Nurses, Primary Care Mental Health Workers, who have an interest in developing an enhanced understanding of mental health care in the community.

A key component of the module is to address relevant knowledge and skills to enhance access to and effectiveness of primary care services and mental health care delivery through considering both evidence-based and practice based innovative approaches.

This module will focus upon issues directly relevant to mental health within primary care clinical practice, using a bio-psychosocial framework to enable module participants to develop knowledge and skills in evidence-based interventions, mental health diagnosis, assessment and screening, pharmacological and psychological treatment interventions, including cognitive-behavioural approaches, collaborative case management and community engagement.

Learning objectives

1. Demonstrate critical understanding and awareness regarding the prevalence and presentation of mental health problems within primary care.

2. Critically analyse relevant government health policy underpinning the provision of effective primary mental health care

3. Identify and critically consider the benefits arising from collaborative case management within primary mental health care.

4. Evaluate a range of empirically supported interventions in mental health within primary care and determine which ones are appropriate

5. Critique appropriate measures around effective risk management in relation to vulnerable mental health populations

6. Critically consider social and cultural aspects of mental health care

The module content is based around seven themes which are as follows:

1. NICE guidelines and evidence based treatment – part 1
2. NICE guidelines and evidence based treatment – part 2
