About

I have been teaching French at the Centre for Modern Languages since 2006, to Open Access and MOMD students. I previously worked at Nottingham Trent University and the University of Franche-Comté (France).

Qualifications

Master in Applied Linguistics

Maitrise de Français Langue Etrangère

BA/"licence" in English Literature and Civilisation

Biography

I took my undergraduate and postgraduate studies at the University of Franche-Comté, France, where I also taught undergraduates in Applied Linguistics (or Sciences du Langage). I came to the UK in 2005 and worked as a French teaching assistant at Nottingham Trent University, and started working at the University of Birmingham in 2006.

Teaching

Teaching different levels for the Open Access courses.

Undergraduate teaching : MOMD modules and Tandem Learning module.

Research

PhD started on language learning and communication strategies, native/non-native interactions and development of the communicative competence. Masters degree was focused on the same research, based on a corpus of native/non-native interactions by telephone.
