We use cookies to ensure that we deliver the best user experience of our website. If you would like to, you can change your cookie settings at any time. Continue

Music

With the opening of the Bramall music building (http://www.birmingham.ac.uk/bramall/index.aspx) in September 2012, the University has embarked on an exciting musical journey. The 450-seat auditorium is the most flexible performance space at a UK university - suitable for performances from solo voice, early music, to a full symphony orchestra. When not used for music, it is a high profile location for drama and dance performance and for prestigious lectures.

Professor Andrew Kirkman, Head of Music "The Bramall Music Building is a fantastic shot in th arm for our music programmes, which are rapidly going from strength to strength. It provides us with a platform to build a fine music department into one of the world's best: we are very excited about what the future holds."

The 16 million pound investment will continue to attract and train the most talented students- nurturing them as they go on to make an important contribution to composition and performance of music in the UK and worldwide.

The University offers a number of scholarships in Music (/undergraduate/fees/funding/music-scholarships.aspx), each worth £1,000 per year to students who plan to start their studies at Birmingham in 2014-15. The scholarships are available to any academic subject (however you must not be studying a programme offered by the Department of Music).

The awards are open to home undergraduate students only and will be tenable for three years, subject to satisfactory academic progression at 2:1 standard.

© University of Birmingham 2014