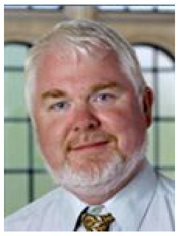
Professor Steve Busby (/schools/biosciences/staff/profile.aspx?ReferenceId=5078&Name=professor-steve-busby)



Professor of Biochemistry
Head of School

School of Biosciences

Research in Steve Busby's lab is concerned with understanding the molecular mechanisms that control gene expression in bacteria, with particular attention to studying the regulation of transcription initiation in Escherichia coli. Much of the recent work has focussed on the expression of virulence determinants in pathogenic strains.

Senior Lecturer

School of Biosciences

My prime research interest is how the information encoded in chromosomes instructs building of the most complex organ, the brain, and allows an organism to perform elaborate tasks.
