About

Tim Haughton is a political scientist with a particular interest in electoral and party politics, the relationship between politics and government, the interaction between domestic and European sources of change, the relationship between Britain and the EU, the role of the past in the politics of the present and the domestic politics of Slovakia, Slovenia and the Czech Republic. He is the joint editor with Nathaniel Copsey of the Journal of Common Market Studies' Annual Review of the European Union (http://eu.wiley.com/WileyCDA/Section/id-397569.html). He served as the Director of the Centre for Russian and East European Studies (CREES) from August 2012 to July 2014. In that capacity he initiated and organized the celebrations surrounding the Centre's 50th anniversary (http://www.birmingham.ac.uk/schools/government-society/departments/russian-east-european-studies/50-anniversary/index.aspx) including a special series of seminars and an enhanced annual conference, he managed the transformation of CREES from a separate department into a pan-university research centre, and instigated and led the transformation of CREES into the Centre for Russian, European and Eurasian Studies.

Biography

Tim Haughton joined the University of Birmingham in 2003 having previously taught at University College London's School of Slavonic and East European Studies (SSEES), Sheffield University and Comenius University in Bratislava. Initially appointed as Lecturer in the Politics of Central and Eastern Europe, he was promoted to Senior Lecturer in 2006 and was promoted again to Reader (Associate Professor) in European Politics in 2012. He served as the Director of the Centre for Russian and East European Studies/Centre for Russian, European and Eurasian Studies from August 2012 to July 2014.

He has held Visiting Fellowships at Harvard University's Center for European Studies, the Institute for Human Sciences in Vienna, the Institute of International Relations in Prague and was a 2011-12 Austrian Marshall Plan Foundation Fellow at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies in Washington DC.

He has published widely on the politics of Central and Eastern Europe in a number of journals including Communist and Post-Communist Studies, Comparative European Politics, East European Politics, Electoral Studies, Europe-Asia Studies, Journal of Common Market Studies, Journal of Communist Studies and Transition Politics, Party Politics, Political Studies Review, Politics and Policy and West European Politics. He is the author of Constraints and Opportunities of Leadership in Post-Communist Europe (2005) and the editor of Party Politics in Central and Eastern Europe: Does EU Membership Matter? (2011). His research has been funded by the Economic and Social Research Council, the Nuffield Foundation, the Leverhulme Trust, the Centre for East European Language Based Area Studies (CEELBAS) and the Austrian Marshall Plan Foundation.

Dr Haughton has good links with the policy making community, having briefed four successive British Ambassadors/Heads of Mission to Slovakia and given presentations at the State Department in Washington DC.

With Isabelle Hertner he co-convenes the POLSIS departmental seminar series (http://www.birmingham.ac.uk/schools/government-society/departments/political-science-international-studies/events/seminar-series/2013-14/index.aspx).
