Visiting scholars at Birmingham Law School

Birmingham Law School invites applications to our Visiting Scholars scheme. The scheme is open to academics at other institutions wishing to undertake research within the School and take part in the academic life of the University of Birmingham.

For over 80 years Birmingham Law School has made a major contribution to teaching and scholarship. It is a broadly-based School, and has many links with other subjects in the University (including philosophy, government and the social and medical sciences). Our academic staff are amongst the country's most eminent legal scholars and are regular contributors to the scholarly literature on the law and legally-related topics.
