Rising number of inexperienced pilots may lead to more crashes (/schools/business/research/news/2015/march/airline-cost-cutting.aspx)

In the wake of the crash of Germanwings Flight 4U9525, Senior Lecturer in Human Resource Management and Organisational Behaviour Amy Fraher examines the worrying trend in which many airlines are cutting costs by employing less experienced pilots in order to remain competitive.

NHS will face unprecedented challenges over the next five years (/schools/social-policy/departments/health-services-management-centre/news/2015/05/nhs-will-face-challenges-over-the-next-five-years.aspx)

"It remains to be seen whether the 'Devo Manc' model will work and whether its governance model is robust. Whether or not this model is feasible, further integration of health and social care is desirable, not least because cuts in social care have knock-on consequences in the health sector."

Asylum crisis? What crisis? (/schools/social-policy/departments/applied-social-studies/news-and-events/2015/04/asylum-crisis-what-crisis.aspx)

With the monthly asylum application figures published today and these demonstrating a 527 reduction in the number of asylum seekers making their claims on British soil from 2751 in January 2015 and from 2370 the equivalent period last year, I find myself wondering why have the numbers decreased?

Blog: Make elections work for you: check the polls, but follow the money (http://inlogov.com/2015/04/22/make-elections-work-for-you-check-the-polls-but-follow-the-money/)

Written by Chris Game. "Spoiler alert: this is a blog about elections, but not local elections – mainly because it's about election betting, and, with one conspicuous exception, which will be mentioned, our modern-day local election contests and candidates are rarely of sufficiently general interest to attract much serious fixed odds betting."

Deaths in the Mediterranean are a direct result of ongoing crisis in north Africa (http://theconversation.com/four-years-after-west-bombed-gaddafi-chaos-rules-in-libya-40492)

Written by Professor Paul Jackson. The rapid escalation this year in the numbers of people drowned as they flee in leaky boats across the Mediterranean is a direct consequence of the conflict in Iraq, Syria and north Africa, specifically Libya – where the implications of the Western intervention are playing out in the deaths of thousands, whether from the violence itself or as they try desperately to escape to safety.
