

The Making of Health

International Conference of the Historical Demography Society

Paris, 10-11 September 2015

Call for papers

What's new in the health history field?

Ten years after Patrice Bourdelais and Olivier Faure edited the papers of the important conference about The New Practices of Health, the Historical Demography Society seizes the occasion of its 2015 International Conference to investigate this field's renewals.

The research in health history led to define this concept according to its links with nosology and epidemiological classifications, institutional expectancies and dynamics, as well as epidemics' handling.

This conference will seek to explore the measurements of health, the construction of indicators and their political and statistical applications. It will also study epidemics in their geo-historical contexts, along with their demographical, social and economical consequences.

This conference furthermore seeks to broach the subject of disease and illness throughout practices, ways of raising consciousness and action campaigns. It will thus revisit the role of various health professionals as well as the institutional and family implication.

Please, send your abstract (max. 500 words, summarizing the contents of the paper, sources and methodology) and a short bio-bibliography, before 1st December 2014 to colloquesdhsante@gmail.com

Organisation Comity:

Virginie De Luca Barrusse, Claire Fredj, Laurent Heyberger, Isabelle Robin, Nathalie Sage Pranchère, Marion Trévisi.

Scientific Comity:

Fabrice Boudjaaba, Virginie De Luca Barrusse, Claire Fredj, Laurent Heyberger, Michel Oris, Isabelle Robin, Nathalie Sage Pranchère, Marion Trévisi.