My tips to applicants who might have an interview are, firstly, to find out whether or not you do actually have one as not all departments have interviews. If you do have an interview its important to find out what type of interview you're actually going to have, some interviews are group, some are individual, so its important to brush-up on your technique for either one of those. Also, doing things like brushing-up on current affairs and also finding out a bit about the course you're actually applying for, they're important things to do.
