

The Public Transport Interchange (PTI) works will improve pedestrian and vehicular access at the Vincent Drive roundabout. The project will provide designated set down for buses, and improved cycle and footway links around a plaza for University staff and visitors, whilst maintaining access to the University of Birmingham and Queen Elizabeth Hospital.

The work will be phased to minimise impact on pedestrians and vehicle users. Further details are shown overleaf and will be updated should there be any alterations to phases.

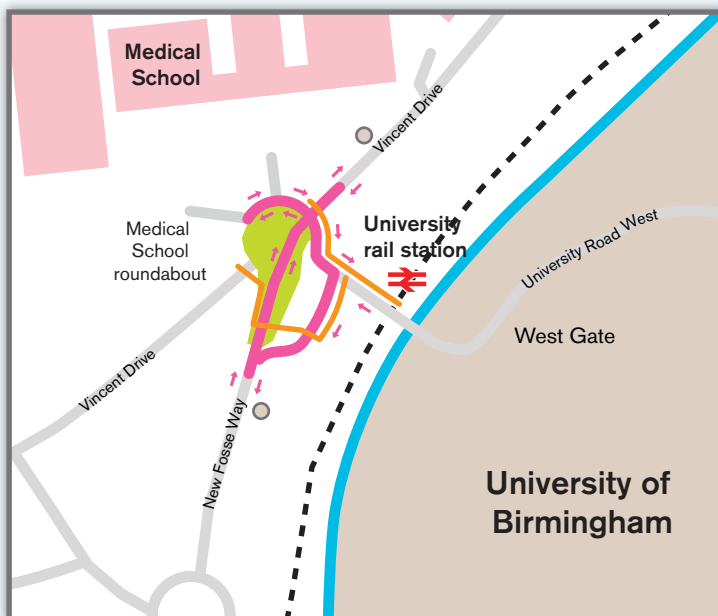

Phase one

6 January – 6 February

Road users accessing the University from Vincent Drive will be able to turn left towards University Road West and New Fosse Way or right to access Medical School staff car parks. The Vincent Drive roundabout will remain open during this phase, however please note there will be no right turn from University Road West. In order to minimise disruption to road users and pedestrians it is advised that staff and visitors use alternative routes to and from the Edgbaston campus, such as South and North Gates.

- Temporary pedestrian routes
- Temporary bus stops

Phase two

7 February – 2 March

Road users accessing the University from Vincent Drive will be able to turn left towards University Road West and New Fosse Way or right to access Medical School staff car parks. Road users accessing the University and Medical School from New Fosse Way will be able to enter and exit using the new road layout.

- Temporary bus stops

Pedestrian access

Two pedestrian routes will be available throughout the works. University staff and visitors the Medical School should use the zebra crossing at Vincent Drive, signposted 'Staff and Medical School.' For visitors to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital and Women's Hospital the most direct pedestrian route will be via the footpath signposted 'Old QE, New QE and Women's Hospital.'

Public transport

Current bus stops at Vincent Drive and University Road West will be out of service during these works. Temporary bus stops will be provided on Vincent Drive and New Fosse Way.

Please use designated routes wherever possible in order to ensure safety for road users and pedestrians.
