The freshest and best artistic talent to have emerged from the West Midlands' five university art schools over the past three years is showcased here as part of a multi-site, now annual award exhibition. As well as a dedicated exhibition gallery, interventions among the Barber's collection include some unexpected contemporary sculpture, painting and installation. This year's selection includes a wide range of media and subject matter: a mixed-media, feminist take on Little Red Riding Hood; thought-provoking urban photography and painting; and beautiful, witty, and at times moving, contemplations on the relationships between humans, their environment and medical science – captured in found wood, bees' wax and even human hair. The exhibition is also on show at the following venues: Birmingham Museum and Art Gallery (until 18 May) Wolverhampton Art Gallery (until 10 May) For further details: www.newartmidlands.org (<http://www.newartmidlands.org/>).
