Course Summary

The principal aim of this course is to prepare medical practitioners for the Faculty of Occupational Medicine (FOM) Diploma in Occupational Medicine examination which is a qualification for those wishing to practice Occupational Medicine as a generalist. For full details of the Diploma examination regulations please refer to the FOM website (<http://www.fom.ac.uk/>).

A secondary aim of the course is to prepare delegates for their initial provision of Occupational Medicine services. Therefore, the course is suitable for general practitioners undertaking occupational health sessions and doctors in other branches of medicine who would like to learn more about occupational medicine.

The course comprises teaching over two 5 day weeks and will include lectures, small group work, case-studies, workplace visits and examination practice. Some background reading will be required during the course and delegates will be invited to prepare a practice portfolio between the two weeks. Taught and reference material will be based upon UK practice (e.g. legislation).
