

Prehistory in Colour: A Lapworth Museum Exhibition

Posted on Saturday 28th April 2007

The colours of prehistory are the subject of a new exhibition at the University of Birmingham's Lapworth Museum. In a series of sketches, current student Helen Lees demonstrates how she interprets a world that was without people.

Inspired by some of the fossils and remains in the Museum Helen experiments with the shapes of prehistory and the fact that we do not know what colours are true to this era.

Helen says, 'The concept of a world without people is fascinating and beautiful. It creates new ideas about what it means to be a human and to live with and alongside other people'.

Admission is free and the exhibition continues at the Lapworth Museum until 22nd June. The Museum's opening hours are Monday – Friday 9am to 5pm and Saturday – Sunday 2 – 5pm.

Ends

Notes to Editors

Helen has exhibited over the past ten years in London, Kent and Paris and is a self taught artist. She is currently studying for a part-time PhD in the School of Education.

For further information about the artist please visit www.helenlees.com

For further information

Kate Chapple, Press Officer, University of Birmingham, tel 0121 414 2772 or 07789 921164.

---

Privacy | Legal | Cookies and cookie policy | Accessibility | Site map | Website feedback | Charitable information

© University of Birmingham 2015

