Boost your business IQ

The University has a large portfolio of medical, biomedical, engineering and environmental patents available for licensing to organisations like yours. Whether it's a life-changing vaccine or a piece of time-saving technology, our intellectual property could be an important part of your company's future.

When your organisation needs fresh thinking, the University of Birmingham offers expert consultancy to ensure you succeed. From help with technology, testing and tendering through to project management and problem solving, we can send you the brightest minds from the field of your choice to relieve the burden and improve the outcome.

Over the years the University of Birmingham has also set up a number of companies to commercialise the results of its research, and has established a portfolio of companies in which it retains an equity stake.
