About

I am Professor of Byzantine Art History, with particular interest in 'iconoclasm', the relationship between text and image, and gender. I am also Director of the Centre for Byzantine, Ottoman and Modern Greek Studies \(/research/activity/bomgs/index.aspx\), which is a unique research cluster with an international reputation, a thriving postgraduate community, and its own journal and two monograph series.

Qualifications

- BA
- MA (Pennsylvania)
- PhD (John Hopkins)

Biography

My research interest in iconoclasm has led to the publication of numerous articles and two books (the most recent of which, Byzantium in the iconoclast era, a history, weighs in at 2 kilograms), and was invited by Harvard University to organise an international workshop on Iconoclasm in 2009. This led to the formation of a research group – the Iconoclasm Network, with 16 members from across America and Europe – for which I have received three years of funding from the Arts and Humanities Research Council. We are working closely with Tate Britain on an exhibition on iconoclasm in Britain to open in September 2013. A shorter book, The re-invention of Byzantine Iconoclasm, will appear in the Spring. My research on iconoclasm has led to a related interest in cultural exchange, and two of my current PhD students work in this area.

My interest in text and image is longstanding, and was the subject of my first book (Vision and meaning in Byzantium) as well as a number of articles. This project has led me to a strong subsidiary interest in visual theory, visual literacy and visual semiotics – all of which tie into my third key area of interest, gender in the Byzantine world. I co-edited Gender in the Early Medieval World, am on the editorial board of Gender and History, and have most recently given the lecture on Gender in Byzantium at the Princeton conference on Re-Defining Byzantium: Art and Thought in the Byzantine World. Most of my past and current PhD students (see below) work in areas related to these two interests.

All of these interests came together in the Arts and Humanities Research Council funded project on Icons, relics and the cult of the Virgin, which I ran 2003 and 2006. This has resulted in The cult of the Mother of God in Byzantium, texts and images (Ashgate, 2011), which I co-edited with Mary Cunningham. Mary and I are also completing a book on The Virgin Mary in the Byzantine world, 600-1000: relics, icons, words and the rituals of daily life

Teaching

I teach undergraduate courses on Byzantium and the Transformation of the Roman World; Gender in Byzantium; and Byzantine Art and Architecture. My postgraduate seminars focus on Byzantine art and Byzantine gender studies.

Postgraduate supervision

My core areas of supervision are 1.) Byzantine art history and cultural production and 2. Gender (women, men and eunuchs) in Byzantium.

I have supervised eight PhD dissertations to completion, on topics as diverse as: Martyrs, cults and water in the early Christian world; The church of the Archangel Michael (Candia, Crete); Byzantine aristocratic women in the Palaiologan period; The 12th-century illustrated copies of the Sermons of James of Kokkinobaphos; Heavenly Jerusalem and the imperial palace: text and image; The post-resurrection appearances of Christ; the Cult of St Anne in Byzantium; and The Byzantine architecture of the Black Sea region. I have 8 current PhD students, working on: Byzantine textile production; the Byzantine life course; the Cult of St Helen in the Byzantine and post-Byzantine world; Monasteries and pilgrimage in post-conquest Palestine; Byzantine coinage and trade with India; Competitive sharing: a re-evaluation of the impact of Byzantine culture on the west; and Monastic architecture in Thrace.

Research

Late Antique, Byzantine and early medieval art, architecture and material culture, the relationship between word and image; the study of illuminated manuscripts; theories of perception and interpretation; the transmission of cultural capital, in particular the movement through trade, gift exchange or diplomatic gift of luxury products; gender.

Other activities

I am active in a number of societies, and am on the executive committee of the Society for the Promotion of Byzantine Studies. I sit on the editorial boards of the Birmingham Byzantine and Ottoman Studies series (Ashgate), and Cultural encounters in late antiquity and the middle ages (Brepols). I have served on the Board for British Academy Sponsored Institutes and Societies (BASIS), with special responsibility for the British School at Rome and the British Institute at Ankara, and the International Engagement Committee of the British Academy. In 2010, I received the Distinguished Alumnae Award from the Pennsylvania State University.

I have organised two Byzantine Spring Symposia at Birmingham, was a member of the organising committee for the Congress of Byzantine Studies in London in 2006, and am an international consultant for the forMUSE-Projekt (Papirusmuseum – Museum der Kultur in Ägypten. Neue Aspekte in einem Museum mit besonderem Potential) run by the University of Vienna and the Österreichische Nationalmuseum.
