

Inaugural Critical Sexology in the Midlands seminar

Posted on Friday 21st February 2014

On 14 February, the long-running and popular Critical Sexology seminar, originally based in London, and more recently in the North, came to the Midlands with an afternoon-long seminar at University of Birmingham on "Rethinking Foucault for 21st-Century Sexuality Studies".

The speakers were Dr Romana Byrne (independent scholar), Dr Oliver Davis (University of Warwick), and Dr Emma Foster \(/staff/profiles/government-society/foster-emma.aspx\) (University of Birmingham). The seminar was convened and the discussion led by Professor Lisa Downing \(/staff/profiles/french/downing-lisa.aspx\), Professor of French Discourses of Sexuality, who has co-organised the Critical Sexology series for the past eight years.

More information: www.criticalsexology.org.uk (<http://www.criticalsexology.org.uk>)

