About

Jessica is a chartered psychologist and an HCPC registered forensic psychologist. Her primary areas of research are policing and sexual offending. She is the founder of the international academic-practitioner C-LINK network (Crime Linkage International Network, www.crimelinkage.org (<http://www.crimelinkage.org>)).

Qualifications

- PhD (Leicester), 'Juvenile sex offending: An investigative perspective'.
- M.Sc. Forensic Psychology (Kent)
- B.Sc. (Hons) Psychology (Southampton)

Biography

Jessica began her career in forensic psychology as a crime analyst for the London Metropolitan Police where she specialised in the analysis of stranger sex offences and homicides. Following this, she took up the post of Lecturer in Forensic Psychology at the University of Leicester where she worked for approximately six years and was the Course Leader of two distance-learning Masters courses in forensic psychology. Whilst working full-time she studied for her PhD part-time. The focus of her PhD reflected her previous employment as a crime analyst and investigated whether rape series committed by juvenile sex offenders could be accurately identified using similarity in modus operandi. In 2008 she moved to the University of Gloucestershire and took up the post of Principal Lecturer in Forensic Psychology. There she designed and set up two new courses in forensic psychology. In 2010, she joined the Centre for Forensic and Criminological Psychology \(/research/activity/psychology/forensic/cfcp/index.aspx\) at the University of Birmingham.

Since commencing her career in academia in 2002, Jessica has continued to stay involved in case work and consultancy. She has been consulted on high profile cases for the London Metropolitan Police and the Scottish Crown Office. She has conducted operational research for several police forces and agencies, including Northamptonshire Police, Greater Manchester Police, the London Metropolitan Police, the National Policing Improvement Agency and the South African Police Service, and for the Youth Offending Service. In recognition of her early career achievement, Jessica received an award from the European Association of Psychology and Law in 2010.

In 2013, following the award of the Leverhulme International Networks grant, she founded C-LINK (Crime Linkage International Network), an international network for practitioners and researchers with a professional interest in the behavioural linking of crimes (www.crimelinkage.org (<http://www.crimelinkage.org>)).

Teaching

Jessica is the Course Director of the MSc/PGDip in Clinical Criminology and the MSc in Criminological Psychology. She supervises several PhD students and is the academic tutor for a number of postgraduate students registered on the suite of forensic psychology postgraduate courses. She also supervises the research of two undergraduate psychology students per year. She lectures on several forensic psychology postgraduate modules as well as contributing to the undergraduate modules in forensic psychology.

Postgraduate supervision

Jessica has supervised more than 100 MSc students to date and supervises several ForenPsyD students each year.

Current PhD students:

Kari Davies

Paul Dawson (co-supervised with Louise Dixon)

Fazeelat Duran (co-supervised with Beth Grunfeld)

Emma Jones (co-supervised with Tony Beech)

Kamonchanok Montasevee (co-supervised with Louise Dixon)

Chelsea Slater

Completed PhD Supervision:

Teresa da Silva

Mark Kells

Zoe Stephenson
