- Criminal Evidence and Proof (LLM, Module Leader)

Postgraduate supervision

Imogen is currently supervising PhD's considering unequal rules in criminal evidence law and consent to harm. She is happy to supervise projects in the following areas:

- Criminal law, especially regarding the regulation of non-fatal violence and marginal sexual preferences
- Criminal evidence law
- Criminal justice process

Research

Imogen's research interests have, and continue to, overlap with her teaching interests. She has published articles about various rules of criminal evidence, concentrating on the political and rhetorical dimension of their drafting and interpretation. She has also examined the criminalisation of 'unnatural' sexual acts and is interested in the way that dead bodies are dealt with by the criminal law. She has given papers at international conferences on all of these topics. More recently, Imogen has been involved in the submission of a funding bid to the Economic and Social Research Council for a project which seeks to contrast the legal and lay perceptions of the appropriate role of consent in regulating the criminalisation of sexually motivated violence.
