

The Poynting Research Institute at Birmingham aims to provide the infrastructure and facilities to bridge the gap between research and technology and thereby generate novel and innovative solutions to real world problems for both industry and government.

The not-for-profit Poynting Institute undertakes low Technology Readiness Level (TRL) contract research itself and also in collaboration with commercial entities. Funding is sought from Government and Industry and is underpinned by Research Council Funding and other public sector funding.

