University of Birmingham

Craft beer in, sat navs out of inflation 'shopping basket' – but what does this really tell us?

Professor Isabelle Szminig

“Do melons, sweet potatoes, craft beer and e-cigarettes feature in your weekly shop? They’ve been added to the shopping basket of goods that’s used to measure UK inflation, while sat navs and yoghurt drinks have been taken out.”

[Read full opinion (/research/perspective/inflation-szmigin.aspx)]

Have your say

Add Your Feedback

Name (required)

Email (required)

Url (optional)

Comments (required)

Submit Comment

Feedback

Privacy | Legal | Cookies and cookie policy | Accessibility | Site map | Website feedback | Charitable information

© University of Birmingham 2015