

Students Discuss Professor Al Roth's Lecture at the University of Birmingham

Posted on Friday 15th February 2013

On 4th February 2013 Nobel Prize winner Professor Al Roth visited the University of Birmingham, delivering a guest lecture to students, staff and alumni in the Great Hall which focussed on "The New Economics of Matchmaking and Market Design".

After the lecture we caught up with an undergraduate and postgraduate student to get their views on the lecture and how having guest speakers visit the University enhances their student experience.

Related news and videos

View our preview video ahead of Professor Roth's guest lecture \(/schools/business/departments/economics/news/2013/february/professor-al-roth-at-the-university-of-birmingham.aspx\). (04/02/2013)

Watch our video interview with Professor Roth. \(/schools/business/departments/economics/news/2013/february/nobel-prize-winner-professor-al-roth-guest-lectures-at-the-university-of-birmingham.aspx\) (05/02/2013)