About

Paul Edwards joined BBS in April 2011 from Warwick Business School where he was Director of the Industrial Relations Research Unit and held several Associate Dean positions. He is a Fellow of the British Academy, and has served as the chair of the Academy's Social Science Group. He was a member of the 2008 RAE sub-panel for business and management, and is a member of the sub-panel for REF 2014.

Qualifications

- BA, Economics, University of Cambridge
- BPhil, Sociology, University of Oxford
- DPhil, Sociology, University of Oxford

Biography

His research career began with the study of workplace industrial relations and industrial conflict. He has subsequently studied new management practices in the workplace and managerial careers, both in the UK and in international comparison. Recent research projects include the first representative survey of the human resource management practices of multinational companies in the UK; this survey is the base of an international team embracing 7 other countries. Current research is focusing on small firms and their employment practices, with a particular emphasis on firms run by new migrant to the UK.
