About

Ron Hallmark spent his career mainly in the Department of French Studies, University of Birmingham, where his specialist interests lay in the literature and culture of sixteenth century France, and in language.

In particular, he was, for a number of years, responsible for devising and delivering language courses appropriate for students of Commerce and Social Science.

His administrative duties focussed on initiating and maintaining links with academic institutions in France. He was for many years responsible for supervising compulsory study-residence abroad, in the process nurturing ERASMUS partnerships and coordinating an ICP. In 1999, he was made a Chevalier dans l'Ordre des Palmes Académiques for services to French culture.

Qualifications

BA (Dual Hons) Sheffield
