

Investigating figurative proficiency at different levels of second language writing

Posted on Friday 13th April 2012

Jeannette Littlemore \(/staff/profiles/elal/littlemore-jeannette.aspx\) has just published the following paper:

Littlemore, J., Krennmayr, T., Turner, J. And Turner, S. (2012). Investigating figurative proficiency at different levels of second language writing (http://www.cambridgeesol.org/rs_notes/rs_nts47.pdf). Research Notes, 47, 14-28.

One of the co-authors, Sarah Turner is a Department of English PhD student and James Turner was an MA student at the University. Tina Krennmayr is at VU Amsterdam.

The article is a final report from a research project funded by Cambridge ESOL ('Research Notes' is their publication). The focus was on the production of metaphor by learners of English.

