

'The Tempest', Verona and Internationalisation

Posted on Wednesday 2nd November 2011

The Shakespeare Institute is running a conference with the University of Verona in December this year to celebrate the 400th anniversary of 'The Tempest'. The event announces a new phase in the Institute's internationalisation strategy, which also involves a new and special relationship with Ludwig-Maximilian University in Munich and closer co-operation with both The Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington DC and a cluster of Shakespearean institutions in Chicago. Partnerships are also being developed with colleagues in India.

Professor Ewan Fernie (</staff/profiles/shakespeare/fernie-ewan.aspx>), who is speaking in Verona and was on the Scientific Committee for the conference, said, 'It's a very exciting time for the Institute. We're getting closer all the time to the RSC and the Shakespeare Birthplace Trust. We've come to a historic agreement with the fabulous New Library of Birmingham. And we're developing an utterly distinctive new creative curriculum which will lead to postgraduate degrees which are highly prized in the academy, the theatre and other cultural industries. In addition to all that, only last week our new Director, Professor Michael Dobson, made the national news (</schools/edacs/departments/shakespeare/news/2011/dobson-anonymous.aspx>)!'
