

Students filmed by Korean National Assembly TV

Posted on Thursday 23rd February 2012

International Masters students, taking the 'Human Rights, Citizenship & Environment' module, were filmed by Korean National Assembly TV (NATV), for a programme about citizenship education around the world. NATV is a government channel which broadcasts the Assembly proceedings, and related programmes. The students were attending a lecture on 'Water education' with Dr Chris Williams, which included Korean and South African case studies. Students from Korea and Britain, and Professor Lynn Davies, were interviewed about their views on citizenship education in British universities and schools.