About

Tom started his career as a high school teacher in economics and accountancy. He was a member of the academic staff of the following tertiary institutions: University of South Africa (Pretoria, South Africa), Central University of Technology (Bloemfontein, South Africa), Vista University (Sebokeng, South Africa) and the University of Johannesburg before joining the University of Birmingham in 2008 and was awarded Professor Emeritus status from the University of Johannesburg. His doctoral thesis was on the influence of a schooling system on the economy of a country. This interest was further researched and explored and reported on in eight co-authored books, three chapter contributions to academic books and 31 peer reviewed journal articles. He presented his work at more than 32 international conferences.

He was the deputy president of the Commonwealth Council for Educational Administration and Management (CCEAM) (2004-2008) and on the steering committee for the biannual conference in Durban, South Africa (2008).

He is on the editorial boards of the Journal of Research and Reflections in Education (JRRE), University of Education, Lahore, India; Professional Development in Education (Editor: Ken Jones, Swansea Metropolitan University, UK); and Journal of Research on Leadership Education (University of Missouri-Columbia, USA).

He is presently involved in a five year research project on failing schools in South Africa funded by the South African National Research Foundation.
