Research

Theory and empirical evidence in relation to:

- Multidisciplinary analysis of participation, choice and engagement in secondary and higher education.

- Private and public finance of education.
- Conceptual change with particular reference to understanding in economics.
- Relationships between different theoretical perspectives on conceptual change, particularly Variation Theory and Threshold Concepts.
- Development of teachers' thinking and practice through 'Learning Study'.

Projects

2009-2010 Information Needs of Undergraduate Students (with Oakleigh Consulting), Higher Education Funding Council for England, £130,070

Knowledge exchange and impact

- Research on student finance was featured in the lead article of the Guardian on 14th February 2008 and was subsequently widely cited, including the report on social mobility from Alan Milburn for the Cabinet Office.
- Research on Flexible Degrees indicated the cost effectiveness of Fast-Track degrees which were subsequently identified by the Secretary of State as a promising area for development in Higher Education (December 2009).
- Research in 2010 identified students' information preferences when choosing where to study in higher education. These priorities were reflected in the policy manifesto published by the new coalition government in May 2010.

Other activities

- Editor-in-chief, International Review of Economics Education
- Gambrinus Fellow, Technical University of Dortmund, Germany. (2010-11).
- Affiliated Professor: Stockholm University, Sweden.
- Visiting Professor: Staffordshire University, UK.
