"The Russian department! It was a great place to study, a very supportive environment and lovely people. I got on with everyone on the course and have some fantastic memories."

Maya Atwal, MSc Contemporary Russian and East European Studies \(2007\) \(/schools/government-society/departments/russian-east-european-studies/alumni/profiles/atwal-maya.aspx\)

"I wished to broaden my knowledge of the region to include comparative politics in the region alongside continuing to develop my Russian language skills in a centre that was renowned for its research excellence in Russia and Central and Eastern-Europe."

Dr John Tedstrom, PhD Russian and East European Studies \(1994\) \(/schools/government-society/departments/russian-east-european-studies/alumni/profiles/tedstrom-john.aspx\)

"I learned to appreciate the larger context of the experience we're all having - it's one thing to have experts in particular subjects and another to share that experience in a useful way."
