

Staff

The Ironbridge International Institute for Cultural Heritage is based at the University of Birmingham.

We host a large number of external lecturers and visiting scholars who offer their expertise and experience to our programmes. These contributions are regularly reviewed to keep them fresh and relevant to the current situation.

Senior Lecturer in Heritage Valuation

Ironbridge International Institute for Cultural Heritage

I am an archaeologist with an interest in what archaeology 'does' in the world – how it came to be as it is, why we study what we do in the way we do it, and what that means in terms of understanding ourselves. I work particularly in two fields: cultural heritage; and conflict archaeology, especially the archaeology of battlefields. I have been most recently ...

Lecturer in Cultural Heritage Studies

Ironbridge International Institute for Cultural Heritage

An anthropologist by education, I enjoy doing interdisciplinary research. My main interest is the production of heritage in post/colonial contexts and the associated politics of history, social memory and development, including local as well as transnational relations and practices, from heritage management to tourism and the social lives of the people living near designated heritage ...

Professor of Cultural Heritage

Director, Ironbridge International Institute for Cultural Heritage

Ironbridge International Institute for Cultural Heritage

I am Director of the Ironbridge International Institute for Cultural Heritage - a major inter-disciplinary research and graduate Institute working with the World Heritage Site and associated museums of Ironbridge.

My interests lie in how we produce and consume categories of heritage within changing cultural and cross-cultural contexts. I am particularly interested ...
