

Postgraduate study

The Institute courses provide training for people embarking on, or developing careers in, many aspects of heritage.

Over six hundred students have now followed the Masters and Diploma programmes. Many now occupy important positions in museums and conservation agencies.

The modular structure of the full-time courses makes them attractive to professional curators, conservationists and archaeologists seeking upward or sideways shifts in their careers, and to international students seeking opportunities for directed study travel in Britain.

The following courses are available:
