About

My main research interests are in German literature of the period 1750-1815, with a particular interest in literary responses to political and social change. I am currently working on a monograph on the German idyll during this period. I have also published on the development of German literature in the context of the unification of Germany in 1871. I teach widely across the German Studies curriculum at Birmingham, and offer courses on German language, history and literature, and on German cinema.

Biography

Originally from Cardiff, and a native speaker of Welsh, I studied Modern Languages (German and French) at Robinson College, Cambridge and completed my doctorate in German Studies at the University of Birmingham under the supervision of Professor Michael Perraudin (now Sheffield). I have been a staff member at the University of Birmingham since 2000.

Teaching

Within the Department, I teach German language, literature, history and film, and I contribute to European Studies courses in Film Studies. In second year, I offer an introductory course on German film, as well as a course of Germany in the Age of Enlightenment. I also teach a final-year option on German-Language Cinema since 1960.

Postgraduate supervision

I am happy to supervise postgraduate projects within my areas of interest. I have recently supervised an MPhil project on the historical dramas of Franz Grillparzer and co-supervised a PhD on 'Nietzsche, Goethe and the Nineteenth-Century Tradition of Bildung'. I am currently involved in supervising Leila Mukhida's PhD project Authority, Authenticity and the Contemporary German-Speaking Auteur.

Research

My research is focused on German literature from 1750 to 1815. My previous research publications include a monograph on Heinrich von Kleist's politics and a first edition (with David Hill) of J.M.R. Lenz's writings on social and military reform (the so-called 'Berkaer Projekt'). I am currently working on a monograph on the idyll in German in the 'Age of Goethe'.

I serve on the Steering Committee of the Birmingham Eighteenth-Century Centre \(http://www.becc.bham.ac.uk/\).
