

Art History Master Class

Posted on Wednesday 22nd August 2012

Dr Elizabeth L'Estrange (/staff/profiles/historyofart/lestrange-elizabeth.aspx) will be talking about studying History of Art at university as part of the Art History Master Class organised by the Wallace Collection in London on 25 September.

This study day is for Year 12 and 13 Art History students and others considering taking Art History at university. Students will find out what studying Art History at university involves, gain practical skills in analysing works of art and object handling, discover what museum conservation involves and see where taking an Art History degree can lead. The day will comprise of gallery discussion, group work and talks from university lecturers, art historians and museum professionals.

For more detail visit the Wallace Collection website. (<http://www.wallacecollection.org/education/schools/secondary>)