

Postgraduate student success: Joint Session

Posted on Monday 29th April 2013

We are delighted to learn that our postgraduate student Naomi Thompson's paper 'Is Naturalness Natural?' has been accepted for presentation in the Postgraduate Session (<http://www.aristoteliansociety.org.uk/the-joint-session/the-postgraduate-session/>) of this year's Joint Session of the Mind Association (<http://www.mindassociation.org/>) and the Aristotelian Society (<http://www.aristoteliansociety.org.uk/>).

The competition for the eight places of the two Postgraduate Sessions is fierce every year, and exemplary papers from these sessions will also be published in the Proceedings of the Aristotelian Society. This year's Joint Session (<http://www.aristoteliansociety.org.uk/the-joint-session/the-2013-joint-session/>) will be held at the University of Exeter between 12 and 14 July.

Distinguished Research Professor Ralph Wedgwood (</staff/profiles/philosophy/wedgwood-ralph.aspx>) will also be one of the keynote speakers of the conference. His topic will be 'Doxastic Correctness'. We congratulate Naomi for her latest success and wish her the best of luck for the presentation!
