About

Stuart Connor is a lecturer in Social Policy.

Qualifications

- PhD Health Care Studies, Manchester Metropolitan University (1997)
- BSc (Hons) Combined Honours: Biology and Psychology, Manchester Polytechnic (1992)

Teaching

Undergraduate modules:

- Finding out about Social Policy
- Agency and Morality: Power and ethics in policy and praxis

Postgraduate modules:

- Social Policy: Beyond welfare (MA)

Postgraduate supervision

Stuart is currently supervising a range of PhDs:

- Digital activism and civil (digital) society
- Older people and work in South Korea
- The political economy of hydrogen energy
- Governance and performance of public sector institutions

Particularly interested in supervising work examining the public understanding of social policy and the politics of representation in social policy.

Research

My teaching and research interests include critical approaches to the analysis of contemporary social policy and practice. This work includes examining the role of governments, trade unions, NGOs, social movements, communities and practitioners in the fabrication of 'social problems' and attempts to legitimate, challenge and shape particular policy responses.
