

Honorary HSMC member scoops Social Policy Association prize

Posted on Tuesday 19th July 2011

Simon Duffy, Director of the Centre for Welfare Reform (<http://www.centreforwelfarereform.org/>), and an honorary member of HSMC, has been recognised for his contribution to the policy arena by the Social Policy Association (SPA). Simon was joint winner of the annual prize for an outstanding contribution by a non-academic at the Association's recent awards dinner. Simon has published a series of policy papers and discussion pieces with HSMC about the personalisation agenda and the future of welfare services.

The Centre for Welfare Reform is a research and development network focused on redesigning the welfare state to support citizenship, family and community.
