

How serious are we about integrating health and social care?

Posted on Tuesday 9th July 2013

Current policy stresses the importance of 'integrated care', yet one of the key commentaries on this topic argues that 'you can't integrate a square peg into a round hole'.

In a new opinion piece in 'The Conversation' (<http://theconversation.com/distinction-between-sick-frail-and-disabled-has-to-go-15735>), HSMC Director Jon Glasby places current debates in context and asks how radical we're really prepared to be to resolve this longstanding issue?
