

Review of self-care initiatives in Islington

This research project is to work with Islington CCG to review the development of self-care within the locality and identify how these can be built upon in future.

This evaluation project has been commissioned by Islington Clinical Commissioning Group to help them to understand local progress in introducing self-care initiatives and to identify further areas and opportunities for improvement.

The evaluation will bring together different stakeholders who are involved in self-care to discuss their experiences and perspectives and then use these as the basis of a report for the CCG.
