

Event: Assets, inequality and the future of asset-based policies in the US and UK

Posted on Thursday 19th January 2012

The Centre on Household Assets and Savings Management (CHASM) (/research/activity/social-policy/chasm/index.aspx) is pleased to be hosting 2 events (one in London on 8 March and one in Birmingham on 9 March) on the future of asset-based policies. There is an exciting line-up of leading US researchers and practitioners in the field of asset-based policies, bringing together for the first time US and UK research, policy and practitioner communities to exchange and debate important challenges facing both countries.

The line-up for both events includes:

- Dalton Conley, Dean of Social Science, New York University
- William Darity, Director of the Racial Asset Network, Duke University
- Thomas Shapiro, Director of the Institute of Assets and Social Policy, Brandeis University
- Margaret Sherraden, University of Missouri, St Louis
- Michael Sherraden, University of Washington, St Louis
