About

Denise Tanner is a Senior Lecturer on BA and MA Social Work courses. Her areas of teaching and research interest include community care policy and practice; social work with older people; social work skills; social perspectives of mental distress; and service user involvement in education and research. She is Programme Director for BA Social Work course and has responsibility for teaching and assessment in relation to students' readiness for practice learning. She also undertakes some teaching on Social Work with Adults Post-Qualifying programme. She is Extenuating Circumstances Officer for the School of Social Policy.

Qualifications

- PhD Social Work (University of Warwick, 2005)
- Certificate in Teaching and Learning in Higher Education (Coventry University, 1998)
- Certificate in Supervisory Management (Distinction) (Coventry University, 1995)
- M.Soc.Sc. Mental Disorder Studies (University of Birmingham, 1985)
- BSc. Sociology (1st class) with Certificate of Qualification in Social Work (University of Bath, 1982)

Biography

Denise began her social work career in the voluntary sector, working for Family Service Unit (FSU) in Sheffield. After completing a Masters in Mental Disorder Studies, she then worked for 11 years in the statutory sector, first as a generic community team social worker, and subsequently as a social worker and senior social worker in an Adult Team. During this time, she worked as both an Approved Social Worker (ASW) and a practice teacher. In 1996, she moved into an academic post as Senior Lecturer in Social Work at Coventry University, where she worked part-time until 2002. Between 2002-2004 while completing her PhD, she undertook freelance work, which included development work on service user involvement in social work education, teaching and tutoring on social work courses and training for local Social Services Departments. Between 2004-2008, she held a fixed term appointment as Associate Professor at University of Warwick, where her responsibilities included developing and supporting service user involvement on the social work programme and the development and support of practice learning. She joined Institute of Applied Social Studies in September 2008.

Teaching

- Community care policy and practice
- Social work with adults
- Social work with older people
- Relationship-based practice
- Social work skills
- Qualitative social research
- Service user involvement in research

Postgraduate supervision

Denise is interested in supervising postgraduate students undertaking study in the field of social work with adults, social work with older people and community care more broadly. She is particularly interested in research that uses participatory methods to explore service user experiences and perspectives.

Her recent and current doctoral supervision covers the following areas:

- Social work decision-making in situations involving personalisation and the safeguarding of vulnerable adults
- The abuse of older people within institutional care
- Older people's experiences of compulsion under Mental Health Act

Research

The main focus of her recent research and writing is the promotion of the wellbeing of older people. Her PhD research involved in-depth research with older people exploring their experiences of managing unmet need over a three year period. She has been involved in the evaluation of voluntary sector projects concerned with promoting the independence and wellbeing of older people. Her most recent research explored the experiences of older people with dementia of moving into and between services and how this understanding can be used to improve local services.

Other activities

Denise works as an External Examiner for social work courses and she is currently External Examiner for MA Social Work at Keele University. She is a member of British Association of Social workers (BASW) Special Interest Group on Substance Use. She is Assistant Editor of Journal of Social Work.
