

Understanding and working with parental resistance: exploring insights from research and theory

Posted on Wednesday 24th October 2012

Birmingham Social Work Academy

Donald Forrester, Professor of Social Work Research, University of Bedfordshire

The Birmingham Social Work Academy will be hosting the next of its Masterclass events on Tuesday 15 January 2013 from 4.30 to 6.00 pm at Park House.

Donald Forrester, Professor of Social Work Research at the University of Bedfordshire, where he is Director of The Goldberg Research Centre, will be leading this event. The Goldberg Centre was set up to address the relative lack of empirical research to guide policy and practice in social work by developing excellent research and supporting the user of evidence-based approaches in practice. Professor Forrester has carried out many studies of social work practice with children and families, using highly innovative research methods.

Further information and how to book your place

To read more about this Masterclass and to book your place, see the event flyer \(PDF\) \(/Documents/college-social-sciences/social-work-academy/donald-forrester-masterclass.pdf\)

Registration is FREE for this seminar. To confirm your attendance, please contact Tracey Gray, t.gray@bham.ac.uk (<mailto:t.gray@bham.ac.uk>).