

Sportex academic appointed as Editor-in-Chief of Psychology of Sport and Exercise

Posted on Tuesday 15th November 2011

Dr Nikos Ntoumanis has been recently appointed as joint Editor-in-Chief of Psychology of Sport and Exercise (PSE), the official publication of the European Federation of Sport Psychology (FEPSAC). www.elsevier.com/wps/find/journaldescription.cws_home/620792/description (http://www.elsevier.com/wps/find/journaldescription.cws_home/620792/description)

Dr Ntoumanis will be handling submissions in the area of exercise psychology. PSE is a leading journal in sport and exercise psychology, is published by Elsevier, and has the second highest impact factor among the journals in that field.

Dr Ntoumanis (pronounced "Doumanis") is interested in personal and contextual factors that optimise motivation and promote performance, psychological well-being and health-conducive behaviours in various physical activity settings (exercise, sport, physical education). His work is supported by funding from national and international research councils and charities and has received awards from various academic organisations.

