About

My research interests are in two main areas: Roman poetry of the Republic and Principate, and the reception of classical culture and literature in contemporary film and literature.

Teaching

I teach courses on Roman poetry and prose, Athenian Drama, Latin language, Classics and contemporary/20th century literature, Classics and film.

Postgraduate supervision

I welcome research proposals on women's writing and classical reception, and on any aspect of Roman republican or Augustan poetry.

Current supervision:

- Elizabeth Cook's Achilles as a model for feminist reception
- Ali Smith, gender, and the reception of Ovid's Metamorphoses

Research topics I have supervised in the past include:

- Tacitus' Agricola and the politics of fama
- Romulus and Numa in Ovid's Fasti
- Speech and Silence in Ovid's Heroides
- Postmodernism and Classical Reception

Research

My current projects are:

- the reception of classical literature and myth in contemporary writing by women, and the translation/adaptation of classical literature by women writers.
- a book on Catullus with particular emphasis on the performative aspects of his work

Past research

I have written on forms of closure in Roman and Hellenistic poetry, on the representation of Rome in film, and on Catullus.
