About

I am a language tutor in German in the Centre for Modern Languages. I teach German across the full range of language levels, academic as well as Open Access. In addition I am the co-ordinator for German language Open Access programme

Qualifications

- Staatsexamen für die Sekundarstufe II in English and History, Universität Hannover
- TESOL, Loughborough University
- MA Applied Linguistics, Leicester University

Biography

I have been teaching German at Birmingham University since 2008, previously holding German language posts at Warwick University, Coventry University and Leicester/DeMontfort University. I was born in Kiel, Schleswig Holstein and studied history and English at Hannover University and later undertook Loughborough University's TESOL programme and an MA in Applied Linguistics at Leicester University.

Teaching

I teach on a comprehensive range of German modules, covering academic and Open Access courses. Previously I have been teaching on various academic programmes, covering a diverse range of groups, and in-house training in industry.

Other activities

Since 2010 I am the coordinator for the German language Open Access programme.
