About

I joined the Department of Drama and Theatre Arts in 2012. Prior to this appointment, I held a Humboldt Research Fellowship at the Freie Universität of Berlin, hosted by the departments of Theatre Studies (Erika Fischer-Lichte) and Greek and Latin Studies (Bernd Seidensticker), where I also lectured extensively.

Qualifications

BA in Theatre Studies, University of Athens

MA in Research (Theatre), Royal Holloway, University of London

Dphil in Classics, University of Oxford

Biography

From 2004-2007 I was lead organiser of the annual Symposium on Ancient Drama, a joint event co-organised by the Archive of Performances of Greek and Roman Drama (APGRD), University of Oxford and the Theatre Department of Royal Holloway. From 2007-2009 I was member of the European Network of Research and Documentation of Performances of Ancient Greek Drama (Arc-Net).

I organised the Work-in-Progress Forum of Arc-Net which took place in Epidaurus in July 2007. The Forum was an interdisciplinary event, providing a meeting point for theatre scholars and classicists who share an interest in ancient drama and it featured keynote talks by international dramatists and theatre practitioners, including Tony Harrison and Peter Stein. The conference proceedings have been published by Parodos Verlag, Berlin.

I have worked as an assistant director in professional theatre as well as in the organising team of the Summer Academy of the National Theatre of Greece.

Teaching

I currently convene the study option 'Adaptation' and lecture for the modules 'Dramatic Medium (Greek theatre, Brecht, Absurd)' and 'Theatre and Cultural Politics'.

Postgraduate supervision

I welcome PhD proposals from students who would wish to work on Greek drama and its modern reception, postmodern dramaturgy and performance as well as within the broader field of theatre and politics.

Research

My main research interests lie in the reception of Greek tragedy in the twentieth century. My thesis examined adaptations of the Greek tragic plays in the last decades, presenting an inquiry into the interface between these recent rewritings and major theoretical investigations of postmodernism and its implications for the contemporary reception of the tragic genre. My revised thesis will be published by Oxford University Press by 2013.

My ongoing project investigates the performance of Greek tragedy under fascist regimes in Europe before WWII. The engagement of fascist regimes in Germany, Italy and Greece with ancient Greek theatre is used as a vehicle to explore totalitarian performance aesthetics and to interrogate the vexed relationship between fascism and Greek antiquity. My publication plans include a monograph on fascist performance of Greek drama in the inter-war period.
