About

I have been teaching at the University of Birmingham since 1993. Prior to that I worked for three years at the University of East Anglia. I did my doctoral work in Canada at McGill University, where I held a Commonwealth Scholarship for five years and wrote a PhD on post-1945 British fiction. I took a BA in English (in the School of Cultural and Community Studies) at Sussex University, where I studied between 1979 and 1982.

Qualifications

- BA (Sussex University)
- PhD (McGill University)

Teaching

I have taught in a number of areas over the years: Victorian literature; Modernism; the history of the Avant-Garde; literature and theory; twentieth-century British fiction; 1930s writing; and courses on specific writers (eg Joseph Conrad, Ford Madox Ford, Henry James). I currently teach a range of undergraduate and post-graduate modules, mostly in the area of twentieth-century literature and literary history.

Postgraduate supervision

I have supervised and continue to supervise MA, MPhil and PhD students in all areas of late 19th and 20th century literature and culture. I welcome research proposals in these areas from prospective graduate students. I'm especially interested in supervising students who wish to work on Anglo-American modernism; twentieth-century British fiction; the literature of the 1930s; literature, ethics, and politics; and on such authors as Joseph Conrad, Ford Madox Ford, Henry James, Wyndham Lewis, and J. G. Ballard.

Research

My doctoral work focused on developments in the British novel after the Second World War, and this led to my first book, Postwar British Fiction (1995), which concentrated on the various responses to the legacy of Modernism and to the challenges posed by postmodernism. Since 1995 I have been working primarily on early twentieth-century literature, with a particular focus on Joseph Conrad, Ford Madox Ford, and Wyndham Lewis. I have also maintained my interest in contemporary writing, producing a book on J. G. Ballard (2005), and publishing essays on Michael Chabon, Jim Crace, Howard Jacobson, W. G. Sebald, and Zadie Smith. Wyndham Lewis's writing and painting is an ongoing source of interest; I am currently the editor of the Journal of Wyndham Lewis Studies and the chair of the Wyndham Lewis Society. My book Wyndham Lewis and Modernism (2004) discusses Lewis's wide-ranging contribution to, and critique of, literary and visual modernism. I have recently completed A History of Modernist Literature (Blackwell, in press and forthcoming early 2015).

My interest in late nineteenth- and early twentieth-century literature led me to co-edit T. E. Hulme and the Question of Modernism (2006) with Edward Comentale, Ford Madox Ford: Literary Networks and Cultural Transformations (2008) with Daniel Moore, Wyndham Lewis and the Cultures of Modernity (2011) with Alice Reeve-Tucker and Nathan Waddell, The Oxford Handbook of Modernisms (2010) with Peter Brooker, Deborah Longworth and Andrew Thacker, volume 4 of The Oxford History of the Novel in English: The Reinvention of the British and Irish Novel, 1880-1940 (2011) with Patrick Parrinder, and to undertake Wyndham Lewis: A Critical Guide (2014) with Nathan Waddell. I am currently editing two books of the Collected Works of Wyndham Lewis: Wyndham Lewis, The Caliph's Design (1919) and Wyndham Lewis, The Revenge for Love (1937).

Together with Deborah Longworth and Michael Valdez Moses, I established the journal Modernist Cultures (<http://www.euppublishing.com/journal/mod>) in 2003. I am the editor of the Journal of Wyndham Lewis Studies and am a co-founder of the British Association of Modernist Studies.

I'm also currently writing various essays on a range of topics: the politics of modernism; Huxley's Brave New World; Dreyer's Joan of Arc; Lewis's critique of modernism; the threat of totalitarianism in the 1930s; post-colonialism and Jean Rhys; and Leavis's take on modernism from the early 1930s through to the 1960s.

Other activities

Conferences

I regularly contribute to conferences in England and abroad. Conferences that I have co-organised include:
