About

My main enthusiasm is for eighteenth-century poetry and satire, particularly the work of Alexander Pope and Jonathan Swift, and I have a special interest in textual editing, having produced, over the last few years, editions of Pope's Dunciad and of hoaxes and parodies by Swift. I also enjoy teaching a wide range of English literature in a variety of our undergraduate and postgraduate modules and programmes.

Qualifications

- MA (Oxford)
- PGCE (Oxford)
- PhD (Cambridge)

Biography

Educated at Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford, and Jesus College, Cambridge, I held posts at Jesus College, Cambridge; St Hilda's College, Oxford; the University of Wales, Bangor before coming to the University of Birmingham in 1998.

Teaching

I teach the final-year option 'Gossip, Scandal and Celebrity', in which we explore a wide variety of published and unpublished writings, both familiar and lesser-known, that illustrate the way in which images of authors, public figures and contemporary issues were constructed for eighteenth-century readers. As well as reading well-known authors like Pope and Swift, students enjoy using the online resource Eighteenth Century Collections Online to trace such lesser-known works as pamphlets attacking Pope and Swift, poems on events in the royal family, and essays addressing contemporary controversies.

I am also part of the team that runs the second-year modules 'Epic Ambitions' and 'Stories of the Novel', and I contribute to the teaching of first-year English literature.

At postgraduate level I convene the module team for 'Writing Revolutions 2', part of the MA in English Literature \(/postgraduate/courses/taught/english/english-literature.aspx\). This focuses on the period 1660-1832, and my personal contributions reflect my long-standing interest in the implications of the world of print as it developed in the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries.

Postgraduate supervision

I am particularly interested in supervising students who want to work on eighteenth-century poetry and satire, and on issues of editing and textual transmission.

Research

My research originally took its rise from a long-term enthusiasm for the poetry of Alexander Pope. Having written a PhD dissertation on attitudes to the medieval inheritance in Pope's work, in 1989 I contributed to the growing interest in women and literature with my study Women's Place in Pope's World (Cambridge University Press), which was awarded the Rose Mary Crawshay Prize by the British Academy.

My focus then turned to issues of textual editing, and in 1999 I published an edition of the climactic work of Pope's career, the complex and challenging Dunciad in Four Books of 1743 (Longman Annotated Texts). Since then I have collaborated on the multi-volume The Poems of Alexander Pope for the Longman Annotated English Poets series, and in 2007 I published Volume 3, containing The Dunciad. A Heroic Poem (1728) and The Dunciad Variorum (1729).

In 2013 I published volume II of The Cambridge Edition of the Works of Jonathan Swift, and took on the role of a general editor of the edition. My volume, Parodies, Hoaxes, Mock Treatises: Polite Conversation, Directions to Servants and Other Works, also includes the Bickerstaff Papers and writings on language and manners.

I have also published articles on women writers of the eighteenth century such as Judith Cowper and Mary Leapor, and on wider issues arising from Pope's career, including the relations between literature and music and between Pope and his poetic predecessors.

Research groups

I am Director of the Centre for Literary Editing and the Materiality of the Text.

Other activities

- I am a member of the British Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies, and of the editorial boards of Eighteenth-Century Fiction, and Eighteenth-Century Life.
- I am Research Lead for the School of English, Drama, and American and Canadian Studies.
