About

My work focuses on French, European and women's film-making, on film theory and aesthetics, and on twentieth-century French and feminist thought.

Qualifications

BA, MA (Critical Theory), DPhil (French Studies)

Biography

My BA was in Modern Languages (French and German) at St John's College, Oxford, which I followed with an MA in Critical Theory and DPhil in French Studies at the University of Sussex. I then worked as a lectrice (colloquial assistant of English) for two years in France (Dijon and Paris) before being appointed to a lectureship in French at Birmingham, in 1990. I was made Senior Lecturer in 2001, and Reader in French Film and Gender Studies in 2006.

Teaching

Having organised the French cinema curriculum for the Department of French Studies for many years until 2011, I am now developing film provision for various programmes in the College of Arts and Law. In 2013-14 I taught a new second year module on women's film-making called Behind the Camera: women's cinema from the 1960s to the present, and in 2014-15 am teaching a new final year and Masters level module on Artists' Film and Video from the 1920s to the present.

Postgraduate supervision

I currently supervise one PhD student researching 'madness' and psychiatric experience in French and British women's film and literature and two History of Art students working on avant-garde film and the visual arts. I have supervised or co-supervised 5 PhDs and numerous Masters theses to completion. Please contact me if you are interested in pursuing research on (the history of) film theory and philosophy, feminist thought or approaches to art and film, or French cinema and visual art of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries.

Research

My research is currently in women's cinema, and in the history of French film theory. I have co-edited books on women's erotic writing, Samuel Beckett, and Marguerite Duras, and written a study of the performance artist Orlan and a monograph on the film director Georges Franju which was published in English in 2005 and in French by L'Harmattan/Presses de l'Université de Laval in 2008. My edited book of essays on contemporary European auteur directors, to which I contributed a chapter on François Ozon, has been followed by essays on Michael Haneke, on the concept of identification in film theory, and on feminist philosophy and the films of Sally Potter and Agnes Varda. An edited issue of Studies in European Cinema on women's film-making in France in the 2000s appeared late in 2013, and I am currently co-authoring and editing a critical edition of writings from the French filmology movement, and writing on a book on female subjectivities in the work of French and British women directors.

Other activities

I am on the Editorial Board of the journal Studies in French Cinema (<http://research.ncl.ac.uk/crif/sfc/journal.htm%20>) and a member of its association, as well as of the British Association of Film, Television and Screen Studies, the Women's Film and Television History Network (WTFHN), and the Oregon-based Society for Interdisciplinary Feminist Phenomenology. I regularly attend the annual Film-Philosophy conference and sometimes also the annual conferences of BAFTSS, NECS (the European Network for Cinema Studies) and the Society for French Studies.
