About

I am an enthusiastic teacher and student of Hispanic Literature and Culture and especially that of the Spanish Golden Age, an era that originated many of the most compelling, sophisticated and influential works in Hispanic literature and art. I also have a long-standing interest in translation, having translated (independently and in collaboration) several golden-age comedias, a quantity of previously unpublished Latin American Baroque lyrics (transcribed from manuscript), and a novel, La sonrisa etrusca, by the veteran Spanish novelist José Luis Sampedro (1917-).

Qualifications

- BA Hons. In English and Spanish (Christ Church, Oxford)
- MA (Oxon.)
- DPhil in Modern and Medieval Languages - Spanish (Christ Church, Oxford)

Biography

Dr Jules Whicker was an undergraduate at Christ Church Oxford, where he read for a BA in English and Spanish, and completed his doctorate at the same college. He has taught full-time in the Department since 1996, and was the Sir Henry Thomas Junior Research Fellow for two years prior to this.

Teaching

In 2012-13 Dr. Whicker's teaching has included: the origins of the novel in Spain to 1615 (Don Quijote II), the origins and development of the theatre from the Auto de los Reyes Magos to Calderón's La vida es sueño, the debates regarding the literary and moral controversy provoked by the comedia nueva, other aspects of the Spanish theatre and the works of Cervantes, and classes on Baroque painting. He also convenes the Year 1 core module on Hispanic Literature and teaches the "Selected Texts" literary strand for beginners. Within the European Studies programme, he convenes the "European Novel" module and is responsible for the Spanish section of the "Landmarks in European Literature" module. He also teaches translation, convening the Erasmus Translation and Socrates Translation Project modules in Hispanic Studies, and teaching the Spanish hours for the Year 4 Translation Theory and Practice module in European Studies.

Postgraduate supervision

Dr. whicker is not currently supervising any postgraduate students but welcomes enquiries from anyone considering embarking upon a research degree focussed on any aspect of Hispanic Golden-Age literature or culture.

Research

Dr. Whicker's research interests lie principally in the field of the Golden Age Comedia and have included a detailed study of the work of Juan Ruiz de Alarcón (1580-1639), as well as writing and teaching on the development of the drama in early-modern Spain and the moral controversy concerning the moral status of theatre in the Golden Age. Other interests include the intellectual history and wider cultural background to Golden-Age literature, early-modern Spanish, English and French drama in performance, and Early music in Spain and Latin America.

He is currently working on a number of aspects of golden-age literature, including the nature of tragicomedy in Lope de Vega and Shakespeare and concepts of military virtue and their representation in golden-age Hispanic culture.

Other activities

Dr. Whicker's administrative duties include those of Programme Lead, Director of Education and Admissions Officer for Hispanic Studies, College Joint Honours Liaison Contact, and Personal Tutor.
