About

I joined the University of Birmingham on 1st September 2008 as a Senior Research Fellow in Air Power Studies having retired from the Royal Air Force in June 2008. My career has been a mixture of practicing, studying and writing on air power and wider aspects of international relations and defence policy.

Biography

My early flying career as a navigator was spent in air defence duties on the Phantom F4 and I later commanded 101 Squadron flying VC10K tankers. Staff appointments included 3 years in the Cabinet Office, Strategic Plans in MoD and as Director of Defence Studies for the RAF. In this last appointment I taught on the Higher Command and Staff Course (HCSC). My final job was as Director of the Defence Leadership and Management Centre within the Defence Academy of the United Kingdom.

My first degree was a BSc in Maths and Physics from the University of Dundee; I later gained an LLB from London. I then completed an MPhil in International Relations at the University of Cambridge. I completed my PhD at the University of Birmingham in 2010. I am a Fellow of the Royal Aeronautical Society and of the Institute of Leadership and Management.

Teaching

Peter Gray teaches on all years of the BA in War Studies \(/undergraduate/courses/history/war.aspx\) and supervises Group Research and Dissertations on a range of military history topics including ethics and the legitimacy of armed force. I am actively involved in the MA programmes for the First and Second World Wars. I have developed, and am running, an MA in Air Power History Theory and Practice \(/postgraduate/courses/taught/history/air-power.aspx\).

Postgraduate supervision

Peter Gray is available to supervise, or advise, on air power issues specifically. He is the programme director for the MA in Air Power - History, Theory and Practice \(/postgraduate/courses/taught/history/air-power.aspx\). Peter is in great demand as a supervisor at Doctoral and Mphil levels

Research

Peter Gray is currently researching various aspects of contemporary and historical air power with particular emphasis on the senior leadership aspects.

Other activities

Peter is in considerable demand as an air power speaker at home and abroad. He is an academic adviser to the RAF Centre for Air Power Studies and is on the academic review panel for the RAF Air Power Review.
